AN ODE ON A SERIES EARNED

By Bill Kohler

Methinks God is a baseball fan; you know this must be true.
The Cubs have won the Pennant, the elusive series, too.
Cleveland had us down 2 games, they led us 3 to 1.
Was History going to crush our hopes after 103 games won?

But God is now a baseball fan. His skies are Cubbie blue.
Some think He interceded for the Cubs – as if on cue.
The Cubs had stormed their way back in to tie the Series, see.
Though down by 2 with quiet bats, they tied their foe with 3.

Cleveland played the final game at home. When it ensued, they brought in their Ace, that Kluber dude, to see what he could do.
He stopped the Cubs two times before. His stuff was Koufax-like.
Rizzo, Bryant and Baez - looked dazed; they looked a fright.

But now this 7th game of games would show how time does toll on pitchers needing 4 days' rest, can't spin that same old gold.
When Kluber's arm looked mortal, Baez popped him oh, so deep,
the Indians sought their bull pen star to bring them some relief.

The Tribe brought in their Miller man, the Cub's least favorite topic.
His hits allowed are vaporous. His ERA - microscopic.
This time our boys were ready; this team of Cubs was due,
and Miller's curves and sliders led to 1 run, then to 2.

The Cubs had seen these guys 3 times; their bats were all well timed.
A 5-1 lead emerged quite soon. Our champions were sublime.
Hendricks pitched a masterpiece; his pitches bamboozled batters.
His sliders slipped and smoked their knees; each batter just got madder.

But then a worried Maddon thought one walk was 1 too much.
He said our cool Picasso had begun to lose his touch.
So, out he went for fear that time would soon make Joe a jester.
He pulled out Kyle with all his guile for his favored hero Lester.

His assault includes a battery of Jon & David Ross.
Would taking Hendricks out so soon avoid a fatal loss?
One more out is all we need to ascend to inning 6.
Can memories of 2003 come back to squander this?

Our victory seemed so certain. How would we celebrate?
Dinner out, some Opus One? Let's all stay out real late.
But then another man got on; a wild pitch brought 2 runs home.
Can this be true? Will the boys in blue let a 4-run lead be blown?
But, yes, the lead had dwindled; our edge was cut in half.
Was fate so cruel to bring us to another series gaff?

A 2-run homer broke our hearts; our doom we felt was sure.
6 to 6, our momentum gone, the rest we can't endure.
Then Cubs' fans hearts were praying. They said, "Lord please intervene.
Please, no more deprecation for our favorite baseball team.
The years have not been happy ones; a hundred plus have passed.
We cannot have Chicago come so close to lose at last."

But God is now a baseball fan; He likes it more than not.
The weather starts to change a bit to abate the unraveling plot.
Now, rain begins to quell the tide that seemed to thwart our team.
The game was stopped. We caught our breath. The Indians lost their steam.

When play resumed, Shaw came out cold – our bats had 3 more hits.
An extra inning championship? No one could write this script.

Schwarber starts the 10th on cue; he smacks a hit to right.
Almora brings us more suspense, pinch running with insight.
He moves to 2nd on Bryant's fly to force a Rizzo walk, then Zobrist steps upon the stage, his bat is filled with talk.

The MVP breaks Cleveland's heart with a smoking, crucial double.
Chicago takes the lead again; the Tribe is now in trouble.
They walk our grand slam hero to face our 3rd great catcher.
Montero rocks the baseball world with a hit that shakes the rafters.
Rizzo scores, we're up by 2 with more runs on our plate,
But Bauer stops us in relief. For the Tribe, it's not too late.

The bottom of the 10th is raw; emotion fills our throats.
Is this the inning that finally kills the myths of storied goats?
Will these 3 outs bring joy at last to Cubbie's hearts so sore?
Or will this Tribe of Indians mount a sobering, frightening score?

Edwards nails for us 2 outs, but not before a walk.
Then Davis singles Guyer home; naysayers start to talk.
But Joe puts Monty on the mound to face a red-hot Crisp.
For some odd reason, Martinez bats, an odd pinch-hitting twist.

When Bryant fields his challenging squib to beat M's fast, fleet feet,
The final out is shouted – there is dancing in the street.
We had scored two runs, held them to 1 and the game would end 8-7.
But no one knows if this one game was really won in Heaven.

How strange that rain would come upon a rattling Indian rally.
That umps would stop the play just when our doom seemed our finale.
But Hayward gathered all the Cubs to focus, think anew, so that Genesis' "big inning" refers to our boys in blue.

108 long years have passed, many filled with much remorse.
Chicago with its storied lads now charts a brand new course.
Epstein and his valiant crew have sewn a tapestry that brings the Cubs to top sports lore and cements their legacy.

No one alive has seen the Cubs win baseball's big, brass ring.
It deserves exhaustive diatribes that feign to rhyme and sing.
It triggers odes that toy with words attempting to bring praise to 20+ guys who ransomed joy for the remainder of our days.

And unlike Mudville's Casey, who swung through that last strike three, there's now great joy in Wrigleyville, in Chicago and in me*.

Go Cubs. ☐

We have chosen Hobbies as our overall Teen Read Week Theme at Camas School District this year. We will have many people showing or demonstrating their hobbies from 2:00 to 3:10 in the high school gym.

We will open the celebration with a skit and dance by Missy Doramus' and Candice Smith's 3rd and 4th grade classes.

That will be followed by Vicki Roper leading Amy McCabe's Junior High PE Classes in Yoga exercises.

We have people exhibiting or demonstrating a variety of hobbies. We plan to have the hobbyists and their exhibits on tables placed around the perimeter of the HS Gym. Classes will be able to walk around and visit each exhibit for 5 to 10 minutes.

Later in the year we hope some hobbyist will come back and visit classrooms to teach the children more in-depth about their hobbies so the children can create some things of their own.

Antique cars, dirt bikes, and fly fishing, will be held outside if the weather allows.
