Ketchum-Featherville Road, FS 227 – The Missing Bits!

This summer, a big section of FS 227 will return to service as a result of Camas County's road reconstruction last summer, at two washouts upstream from Baumgartner Campground. The washouts were caused by northside slope instability following the Kelly Fire in 2013. The two new road segments – sited higher up the southside hillsides – restore access to popular camping and day use areas blocked for five years. The road linkup is still cut by a hümongus road washout dating from 2017 stretching from the downstream side of Bowns Campground on Big Smoky downstream a mile or so past the confluence with the South Fork of the Boise. Studies are underway on how best to restore the remaining missing bits of the Ketchum-Featherville road, one of Idaho's principal backcountry highways!
